

I am among the many that agree against cell phone use. I know that safety is the #1 priority among flight attendants, and that is one more item we would have to worry about. I for one do not foresee anything good coming out of this. I think it as more of a disruption to the other passengers who are trying to sleep. If this is allowed to go through it will be the all too familiar movie theatre scene in the air. I worked at a movie theatre for over 6 years and the number one problem is that it disrupts everyone else. I know on the smaller jets there are no movies, however they are pax sleeping and I for one as a pax as well love any amount of sleep I can get. I would also like to mention with these new cell phones that take pictures or text it would be like taking candy from a baby for terrorists to quickly take pics of employees, the structural layout of the planes, its just too much! We cannot allow this to happen for safety #1 and second it would be very annoying. Do a test run of 50+ pax on cell phones in a mock setting and see how quickly it goes bad.
